Gold & Silver Can Help Safeguard Your Savings from the Devaluation of the U.S. Dollar

Planning for a secure retirement is one of the most important decisions investors will ever make, right up there with buying a home and saving for your children's education. Do it right and you can rest easy, knowing that your nest egg will be waiting for you when you decide to hang up the boots and enjoy an exciting new phase of your life. Do it wrong and you may be disappointed to discover that your Golden Years aren't what you always hoped they would be.

Thanks to a little-known law, you can put gold or silver into your IRA or 401k account to own physical precious metals in coin or bar form. You'll never have to wonder if your retirement is secure because YOU have all the control.

Think about this for a minute:

- Most investors have a retirement portfolio that is heavily weighted in volatile equities and hasn't been rebalanced in years.
- People nearing retirement have the most to lose when the stock market declines.
- More Americans ages 65 and older are employed than at any time since at least 2000, and they're spending more time on the job. (Pew Research Center, 2016)
- Increasing asset prices have made it harder than ever to build a nest egg.
- The average life expectancy is rising - retirees will need more money than ever.
- The current ratio of workers to retirees is 5:1. By 2050, it will drop to 3:1. (U.S. News & World Report, 2012)
- There is an ever-smaller number of workers to support increasing numbers of retirees.

Because of all this, there is increasing pressure on the federal government to redistribute wealth and "move money around" to take care of people that don't take care of themselves, and there is a very real concern that the money you've been socking away in your IRA or 401K retirement plan may not actually be there when you need it.

This has already happened with many private pension plans, municipal retirement plans and other accounts that investors thought were secure, but turned out not to be.

What's the Solution?

Take back control of the financial future for yourself and your family. Don't rely on the government, or anyone else, to take care of your hard-earned retirement savings for you. We can help you to transfer funds from your current IRA or your former 401K/403B account to buy physical precious metals, which can assist in preserving your buying power while diversifying your assets from the stock market.

Open an IRA with us and we'll work to ensure there are no unnecessary fees!

You will even have a personal IRA Retirement Account Executive to walk you through the entire process, because safeguarding your money from volatility should be a lot easier than making it was.

WHY PRECIOUS METALS?

Inside or Outside of a Retirement Plan, Tangible Assets Can Give You Better Control and Portfolio Diversification

The laws have changed and individual investors can now roll over funds from an existing retirement account into a Precious Metals IRA or 401K to buy and sell gold, silver, platinum, and palladium without ever having to have the cash in-hand.

Our Retirement Services Division helps investors understand the specifics about how precious metals can play a key role in their account. Our Retirement Specialists will guide you through the entire process of incorporating precious metals into your portfolio, recommending options that are best suited for your individual goals, and helping to avoid unnecessary fees and penalties along the way.

The U.S. Gold Bureau does not recommend the early withdrawal of retirement funds to buy precious metals if it will result in significant fees incurred, but that decision is ultimately up to you.

Precious Metals have historically been used as a hedge against financial upheaval.

Since the dawn of civilization, precious metals have been used as a hedge against political chaos, economic downturns, and financial crisis. Get started with a Precious Metals IRA today to help shelter your retirement savings account against the next downturn in the financial market. Every day you wait, your dollar could be worth less and less.

GOLD PROTECTS YOUR BUYING POWER

In 1950, you could have purchased a house for $17,500.

At that time, the price of gold was $35 per ounce, so you could have paid for that house using 500 ounces of gold.

Since that time, the value of the dollar has plummeted and the price of gold has risen dramatically. To purchase a similar house in 2022, you would need $363,700* BUT ONLY 202 ounces of gold, based on a price of $1,800 per oz.

For thousands of years investors have preserved their buying power through gold ownership. It's like locking in 99¢ gas for the rest of your life, but you can do it on a much larger scale.

UNDERSTANDING SPOT PRICE

What You Need to Know

The “spot price” represents the current market rate for gold (symbol: XAU) and silver (symbol: XAG) contracts as established by the Commodities Exchange (COMEX), a division of the New York Mercantile Exchange (NYMEX). The COMEX is the primary market for commodities brokers, commercial producers and institutional buyers to trade gold and silver options and futures contracts.

The standard size of a contract is 100 ounces for gold and 5,000 ounces for silver. The NYMEX is also the leading exchange for platinum, palladium, aluminum, copper, coal, crude oil, gasoline, heating oil and other commodities. Prices listed on the COMEX in no way represent the selling price for physical gold and silver coins and bars to individual investors, though the spot price is one of several components that ultimately does set that price. For example, the U.S. Mint sells its gold coins to distributors at a premium of 3% to 5% over spot price, and its silver coins at closer to 10% “over spot.”

The commodities markets are much more intricate than most people realize, but overall the spot price is one of the easiest concepts to understand in the industry. Simply put, if you want to buy gold or silver on the spot, rather than waiting until some time in the future, then the spot price (plus any premiums) is what you'll pay right now to obtain it.

As you can imagine, spot prices fluctuate all the time. They react to changes in supply and demand, rising when supply constraints cut the amount of available gold and silver or when customers demand more of it, and falling when there is a surplus in available supplies or the demand disappears.

The investment value of a rare coin depends in large part on the price you pay. If you are acquiring any of our products as an investment, you should evaluate its current market value, potential for appreciation and liquidity, and consult independent sources regarding these factors.

Since rare coins, Investment Grade Coins, and bullion and currencies can decline in value, you should have adequate cash reserves and disposable income before considering acquiring a coin, currency or any type of precious metal product.

We do not recommend early withdrawal from accounts or securities which may result in substantial penalties or fees. You should consult with your independent financial advisor before disposing of any security, annuity, Certificate of Deposit, or other investment to acquire rare coins, modern rare coins, currency or bullion.
